

Suggested Best Practices for Operating Barns in the COVID-19 Environment May 4, 2020

The horse industry, no matter the discipline, has been affected by the “Stay Safe at Home” orders through the COVID-19 situation. While innovative ideas have kept clients and students involved, everyone is ready for reconnecting with their horse again. To that end, we are suggesting the following best practices presented in phases, allowing barn owners to safely re-open and protect themselves, their staff and their clients. The goal is for each barn to develop efficient and effective safety plans which are appropriate for the facility, clients, students and staff. The health, safety and welfare of our horsemen and employees must be in the forefront of our plans.

The below are suggested guidelines that safely re-introduce clients back into the barns. As we acknowledge requirements vary from State to State, the implementation of the below guidelines must align with and not circumvent any local or state guidelines or orders. As state and federal regulations continue to change, this too is a living document and is also subject to change.

Safety of Staff

- Staff showing symptoms will not be permitted to work or enter the facility.
- Staff will practice proper social distancing between each other and clients with a requirement of using a mask when assisting the client to maintain safety.
- Staff will follow proper sanitizing best practices of hand washing and including the use of hand sanitizer.
- Facility will implement access restrictions to prevent clients from entering staff only areas.
- Daily sanitizing of common areas including restrooms, door handles, faucet handles, and any other commonly touched surfaces.
